the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million (12% of the population).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. Another is that the public sector has become more efficient. A third is that the public sector has become more attractive to workers. A fourth is that the public sector has become more diverse.

The public sector has become a more important part of the economy. In 1990, the public sector accounted for 10.5 million jobs, or 12% of the population. By 2000, this had increased to 12.5 million jobs, or 14% of the population.

The public sector has become more efficient. In 1990, the public sector spent £100 billion on health care. By 2000, this had increased to £150 billion, but the number of people in the public sector had only increased by 20%.
